* A message from Australia Post: As of 10 September 2020 - Business is adapting to the challenges presented by the pandemic, which means our normal practice of delivery has been impacted. As a result, we're experiencing substantial delays in our network. These delays are due to: a reduction in air freight capacity and passenger flights (which also carry our parcels), a significant increase in parcels volumes, many of which require manual sorting, health and safety requirements in our network (such as social distancing through zoning, and dedicated shift start times to reduce cross-over of workers). Letter deliveries have also changed and will now be delivered every second day rather than every working day until 30 June 2021. Delivery frequency in rural and remote locations will not be affected. STATE OF VICTORIA: As a result of the stage 4 restrictions in Victoria Melbourne distribution facilities have reduced capacity which may result in increased delays.
