Even though a site has been allocated and money has been allocated by the three Governments, there has no movement on a concert hall/art precinct. There is a need for this in Gosford, particularly if the area is going to grow with high rise residential and other businesses. The boost to tourism would be considerable if the Concert Hall is done well, as Sydney and touring groups would come. We have NOTHING of this nature to attract them at present. It would give the Central Coast a veneer of sophistication, something which at present Sydney people consider we do not have. This has been going on over twenty years, when are we going to see some action?
