Any plan for the future of the Hunter region must include a phasing out of the coal mining industry. Coal mining leaves huge scars on the landscape, pollutes and disturbs water sources, risks health and lives of miners, has a detrimental effects on the health of those living in the vicinity of mines, the open rail coal containers and the shipping terminal.
Of course when it is burnt anywhere on Earth it contributes to global warming.
There are many other industries that are established in this beautiful area, many more can be established without long term degradation and provide jobs and a healthy environment for those who live there.
