Hi Folks,

I have looked over your plan, and there is two things that i think are of particular importance that are missing from it. The first is articulating a pathway towards a post carbon future, which is essential given the global state of affairs around these issues (both climate impacts of emissions and diminishing market for coal)
The second is in regards to the current transport infrastructure. I think that the CycleSafe Network has presented a well documented plan which, if implemented, could assist with growing problems of congestion, emissions, health problems, as well as the point above about moving towards a post carbon future. Please include alternative transport options as more central. public transport or irregular cycleways should not simply be dodgy second options. Bikes are not just for recreation, and transport funding should be applied to reflect that.
