Is there going to be any extension of a railway line into Cessnock? Currently the coal industry has a rail track that runs across the main road into Cessnock (near Aberdare) which has been used to transport coal to the Hunter City, Newcastle port. It would appear to make infrastructure sense to use this rail corridor to Newcastle to include a passenger rail link alongside, for the benefit of the growing population of the city of Cessnock and its surrounds. Are plans being considered for such a rail link?
