Dear Sir/Madam

Re Ingleside Precinct

Adding my voice to the many who have already raised concerns about the density of housing planned for this area.

I would like to see as much natural bushland preserved as possible. This would mean building upwards instead of outwards – I think that is what Sydney needs for the future. And building on land where there has already been interruption to nature eg old factory sites, old housing etc.

Build upwards to keep areas of bushland for people to wander/bike through, to see, smell, and feel alive! The native wildlife also needs wide corridors for moving between colonies – inbreeding will bring disease and some species will not survive this.

Probably the problem of traffic has been done to death, so I will leave that.

Yours faithfully
