

Dear Engage Victoria,

In regards to your public feedback initiative for review of real estate education, I personally think more training is needed for new agents joining the workforce.

The turn-over for real estate agents is far too high, most likely due to lack of training and rapport teaching skills in the current courses.

For the sake of a building a solid foundation in the industry it's important everyone properly understands the roles and responsibilities and methods on how to build a sustainable business.

Please stricken laws and increase the training to provide a much more reliable industry.

Too many agents do whatever they want, then quit...and it gives us all a bad name.

Cam Zamora

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]