Native flora in Victoria is exhaustively protected to the detriment of rural Victorians and our interests, probably because it's easy for city dwellers who are not impacted upon at all, but feel better having said they like the idea of protecting native animals. We cohabit land with native and non native species here. Our culture, connection to land, wellbeing and sense of identity is tied to our areas, native fauna, our animals, and Heritage Brumbies. This review would serve rural Victorians better by serving our needs, culture, identity and interests .....after all, we live with native wildlife, you just look at it in pictures and zoos
