All registration fees should be the same irrespective of the age or career stage of the individual. i.e. "equality".

If you are a practicing engineer who is making use of their registration professionally then the fee should be the same.

For "non-practicing" engineers there is no need for professional registration. Why would a non-practicing engineer contemplate having professional registration?

Same registration = same fee. Not practicing then don't register = simple solution.

"equity" is a meaningless term without definition that prescribes arbitrary discrimination to individuals or favourable otherwise to whichever cohort the Govt decides to favour over others.
