More use of Aboriginal names and Identification of areas on the Bellarine peninsula.

I believe that signs like street signs should include the aboriginal name of the area. Any signs like the one at Lake Connewarre Ash road Leopold, which gives information about the landscape should include any significant aboriginal names and relevant and interesting information about the original inhabitants of the area. International and Australian visitors to the area would find it interesting and it is in line with govt. policy to acknowledge the original inhabitants wherever appropriate.

Jack painter reported the Australia Post initiative during Naidoc week this year.
