Comments: It seems a huge negative impact the mine will have on the local environment using vital water when the river is already stretched at times, to provide drinking water for the local community and vital water for the farmers of both vegetables and livestock to supply food to the Australian public. I believe the positive economic impact of increased demand for local services and some employment will be far less than the negative impact the mine will have on the local farmers to be able to continue farming, also the negative impact on property prices. A pristine part of the country, with so much potential for tourism growth could be a lost opportunity with the horrible mine on the doorstep.
