Many years ago I witness first hand the cruelty involved in a kangaroo cull. The hunters had no regard for the terror and pain they inflicted on these gentle social animals. The suffering I saw left a permanent scar on my mental health. This was 30 years ago. I can tell you right now, there is no humane way to shoot kangaroos. Even in the rare case of an instant kill, the mob that witness their member's horrific death are terrorised. There are many alternatives to culling, and I urge you to explore these further. Even hearing about proposed culls brings back horrific memories for me. I also feel disturbed by the kind of men who can inflict such brutality on a living, feeling being. Our society needs to address this properly.
