Duck Hunting, is not a sport. It is violence. This violence against wildlife is perpetrated by a small percentage (~0.4%) of the population. The majority of Victorians are strongly opposed to it. Of the group that do partake, some must take a waterfowl ID test, but repeatedly large numbers of non-target species are killed or injured. It is nonsensical that this continue. It is widely known that the regional towns near to wetlands do not want or benefit from this activity either. Is there a reasonable argument for this to continue??
