

The only amendment I would like to see is the ability to film captures for educational purposes. Currently in my area there is a huge stigma against snakes so seeing videos would go a long way in education for the public and thus save snakes lives. Currently we can only film them post capture and interaction. So it doesn't really show their instincts which is a huge part of debunking those fears people have.

All other states allow this... except Victoria.