

Review of real estate education regulations

In my view the training provided is not sufficient and needs to be more extensive, current courses do not cover basic skills in customer service, selling, negotiation and time management.

Agents saturate the industry, and for this reason ethics are widely disregarded in a bid to win business, and therefore the risk of disputes between buyers, vendors, landlords and tenants is increased.