

Allan Wilson, Elliston

My name is Allan Wilson, of the Wirangu. Many years ago, 1800s, Elliston, on the cliffs - many of my people were massacred here. It was women and children, babes in arms, old men. Chucked off this cliff by the pastoralists. This area, from Talia Station. It's something that's still remembered here.

I, and many of my people, want closure. I think the people of Elliston want closure of this too. This massacre, that has been hanging on over their head for many years. Now we're going through the reconciliation part of righting this terrible incident, that happened here. My people and the non-Indigenous people, that we've got to, come together so we can benefit all of us here. We can have peace in this area. Peace of mind and a closure for all of us.

Allan Wilson, interview with Tim Burder, Elliston, 14 June 2014. Video and courtesy Tim Burder.