A Speaker Series

The Power of Resilience

Earlier this month, we held the first event in our new live-streamed event series, A Speaker Series, giving you access to the most interesting and inspiring minds from around the world.

Our first event was The Power of Resilience, with Paralympian Dylan Alcott.

In his one hour event with Sales Leader, Nathan Gallagher, Dylan inspired our audience through his own personal storytelling, shedding light on his life experiences and thoughts on resilience - with his characteristic sense of humour, of course.

Be proud of who you are... when you start backing yourself, everybody else backs you.

Dylan learnt from a young age that being in a wheelchair didn't need to hold him back. He now chooses to harness that self-belief, and focuses not on the few things he can't do — but on the many more things that he can.

It's really important in life to have a passion and a purpose. If you're passionate about it, you'll be good at it.

Despite being such an esteemed sportsman, Dylan's true purpose is to provide people with disabilities the access to live the life they want to live. Through his work with the Dylan Alcott Foundation and Ability Fest, Dylan is able to help young people with a disability achieve their goals and increase their accessibility to move towards a more inclusive society.

"The most important thing I've learnt is the importance of a positive perception - it's not the events in life that determine the path you take. It's not the conditions, it's the decisions."

Dylan's personal process is all about the importance of positivity, as well as speaking up and being vulnerable. While Dylan believes personal resilience is important, he also thinks that the power of resilience lies in being vulnerable with your support networks, families and communities, and sharing the load with others when you're not feeling 100%.

Dylan's insights left our audience feeling inspired, and eager for the remaining speakers in the new event series, continuing until June 2021. The incredible line-up of speakers in A Speaker Series will cover a diverse range of topics to empower your success, both personally and professionally. With topics still to come including Entrepreneurialism, Marketing, People and Culture, Leadership, and Digital Technology, this series is available to and suited for all our valued customers.
